Financial Disclosure Statement

Participants will be informed of Special Therapies Institute's financial disclosure with posting on the website and mailings advertising courses, on the first slides of class Power Point presentations, and in printed on first pages in course workbooks and hands.

Special Therapies Institute is a limited liability company that functions solely in professional development activities and trainings. Courses are promoted independently by Special Therapies Institute at all locations and venues.

Susan Vaughan Kratz, OT, CST-D is the primary instructor of all course content. She is the director of Special Therapies Institute and receives a speaker fee for conducting professional trainings.

Course content is derived from Kratz' copyrighted text books. Kratz receives royalties from the sale of these books. Books serve both as workbooks and references guides once participants have returned to their practices. These books are RECOMMENDED, but not required reading for the class. Handouts will be provided to supplement class and lab experiences and come as part of the curriculum.

All proceeds of books are financial interests of Kratz and her publishing company. (Contents of these books make reference to the occupational engagement of babies and children during the process of bodywork activities. Course content frequently refers to the relationship in treating autonomic nervous system and structural stress/strain as foundational intervention to assist the autonomic nervous system, the sensory systems, the basic functional systems to be ready to engage, interactive, and process the world.)

No other financial interests exist.
